SENATOR LEXOW'S PLANS.

He Talks with Nellie Bly About the Coming Exposures.

While the present exposures by the Lexow Committee are stirring up the Tammany politicians and the police pretty effectively, there are developments to come which will prove still more of a sensation. Not a few office-holders under Tammany would like to know what is coming.

"He looks to be mad," ejaculated Stephan.

"Scarcely were the words out of his mouth when the dog sprang directly for his throat."

Stephan quickly drew up his right arm and the dog's fangs fastened into his wrist and hung there.

Stephan tried to shake him off but could not, and Savage drew his revolver and fired into the animal's body. The dog leaped his hold and tried to run away, but both policemen, revolver in hand, were after him and fired lead into him until the animal's eyes were empty.

The dog was severely wounded and rolled over dead. His body looked like a stone from the big bullet holes.

Stephan walked to Bellevue Hospital, where the wound was dressed. The dog's teeth had cut clean through cloth and flesh, making an ugly wound.

Stephan went home and was not able to report for duty to-day.
